Well when a republican convention, and especially a Kansas one, comes out with such a platform, getting square on to almost every principle that that the democratic party has been contending for, it does seem rediculous. And when they endorse Humphrey, and the next noment place a man on the platform who is a resubmissionist in Wichita and a prohibitionist in Hutchinson, they de-

The very strength of the farmers novement is apparent in the common purpose of so many without any welldefined and iron bound organization. In time such things must come. The politicians are already taking alarm, and are evidently setting their wits to work to find out just how to manage this rapidly growing body. That the farmer has everthing to gain and nothing to lose by organizing goes without saying. That he is a dupe of politicians who advocate, invent and pass laws, nearly every one of which are ultimately for the benefit of monopolists, corporations and other associations of men who create nothing and absorb everything, and who are by natural law the enemies of the farmer, is known to every man who reads and thinks. The only way to meet this condition of affairs is for the farmers to keep coming together. and pay no attention to the ridicule of the city party press. Only succeed, and they will quickly turn to your side and tell you they were aware of your wrongs years will see the farmer on top, dietating terms to the present insolent representatives of ill-gotten wealth. - American Dairyman.
